Casappa opens its new Logistics Center in Lemignano di Collecchio (PR)

Lemignano di Collecchio (PR), 21 september 2024 - Casappa, a global leader in hydraulic component and manufacturing technology, officially opens its new Logistics Center in Lemignano di Collecchio (Parma) today in support of its dynamic growth and environmental initiatives. As a designer and producer of advanced hydraulic pumps, motors, filters, and electro-hydraulic systems for the industrial and off-road vehicle markets, Casappa employs roughly 1000 employees worldwide with 2023 revenue of over 200 million Euros.

With over 10,300 square meters (110,900 sq. ft.) under cover, the new Logistics Center provides a new platform for enhancing operational efficiency, production quality and workplace safety with the purpose of satisfying Casappa's global customer demand for a modern, fast and continuously improving supply chain.

Built with state-of-the-art technologies and integrated with remote management systems for total optimization, the new Center is an intelligent and sustainable building which minimizes its environmental impact through active and precise management of all energy-consuming equipment.

Delivering significant reduction on the overall carbon footprint of Casappa, the temperature-controlled Logistics Center is completely gas free, and includes the accompanying construction of a solar panel canopy system covering the employee parking lot to generate electricity and reduce each shaded vehicle's cooling demand.

"We are satisfied with this important innovation by Casappa in the field of ethical and sustainable logistics", said Collecchio mayor Maristella Galli, further calling the new Center, "A project that marks a fundamental moment for our community in terms of progress and innovation."

"This project represents the largest investment made in the history of our Group," states Casappa CEO, Filippo Casappa, "and is fully in line with our long-term growth strategy: innovative, sustainable and future-oriented growth."
